

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Institute for America, China, and the Future of Global Affairs is grateful to each of the authors for their time and insight, to the participants in the October workshop for their generous commentary and feedback, to Sara Abdulla for her sharp guidance and editorial support, to Brian O’Keefe and the SAIS communications team for overseeing the production of this report, and to the Open Society Foundations, whose generous support made this report possible.

ACF, SAIS, and JHU do not take specific policy positions; accordingly, all views expressed herein should be understood to be solely those of the author(s).

Cite this report: Weiss, Jessica Chen, ed. Getting China Right at Home: Addressing the Domestic Challenges of Intensifying Competition. Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies, 2025. <https://acf.sais.jhu.edu/getting-china-right-home.html>.

SCHOOL OF ADVANCED INTERNATIONAL STUDIES (SAIS)

For eight decades, students have come to the Johns Hopkins University SAIS to learn from renowned faculty and distinguished policy practitioners, build their professional networks, and gain hands-on work experience.

The school was founded in 1943 by Paul H. Nitze and Christian A. Herter, statesmen who sought to prepare the next generation of leaders to meet the complex challenges the United States and the world would face following World War II. A distinguished faculty of scholars and policy experts developed an innovative curriculum that emphasized international politics, economics, and foreign languages. That program, combined with skills training and experiential learning, helped prepare students to make a difference in government, civil society, and the private sector. In 1955, SAIS established a campus in Bologna, Italy, and in 1986 the school initiated one of the first Western university programs in the People’s Republic of China, in Nanjing.

Today, SAIS carries on this tradition. Johns Hopkins SAIS alumni number more than 24,000 graduates, a network of professionals working across the globe. From private-sector executives to entrepreneurs, leaders of nongovernmental organizations to ambassadors, and international media correspondents to energy consultants, SAIS alumni are defined by their innovative thinking, analytical approach, and policy expertise. They are leaders in their fields, life-long students committed to the betterment of the world.

INSTITUTE FOR AMERICA, CHINA, AND THE FUTURE OF GLOBAL AFFAIRS (ACF)

The mission of ACF is to add rigor and reason to public and policy discussions on China and the range of domestic and international issues that intersect China’s global role, bringing together experts and practitioners to foster informed public dialogue, promote evidence-based research, and support the next generation of scholars and practitioners.